

Detroit Trust & Bank Co.

Address: 201 W. Fort

Local

State v 10/21/75

State Marker v 8/29/78

National

Detroit Trust Building, 2003

Historic Overview:

The Detroit Trust Company is located on the site of Fort Shelby. It was designed by Albert Kahn in a Renaissance Revival style, popularized by the New York firm of McKim, Mead and White. The interior design of the building, however, made use of the experience Kahn had gained in his industrial design work. The interior provided an abundance of open space and light, which was innovative for office planning of that era. The building was built completely by Detroit contractors and the facade has been only slightly altered by new window frames.

Text as written on Woodwardheritage.com.